AIRMOBILITY

March, 31st, 2025

AirMobility Inc.

AeroStaff, a website that makes it easy for anyone to find a drone pilot, opens.

Matching site for “clients” and “pilots. The site aims to solve the problem of “pilots not being found.

We aim to register approximately 1,200 pilots over the next three years.

Recently, drones are being utilized in a wide range of fields, and the number of drones in use is growing dramatically.

However, the number of pilots who can operate drones has not increased that much, and issues such as the availability of drones but no one to pilot them have been observed.

AirMobility Inc. (Minato-ku, Tokyo, Japan. President & CEO: Hisashi Asai) opened “AeroStaff,” a website that makes it easy for anyone to find drone pilots, on March 31 to address these issues. We expect that this will contribute to the further promotion of drone utilization in Japan.

【Background of Launch “AeroStaff”】

With the development of drone technology, there is a growing need to utilize drones in a variety of situations.

However, we are facing an increasing number of challenges such as “We can arrange for a drone, but we don't have a pilot.

On the other hand, we have also heard from drone pilots that “Now that I have my license, I want to work as a drone pilot in my spare time.” and “I want to take on more and more drone piloting jobs, but what should I do? “

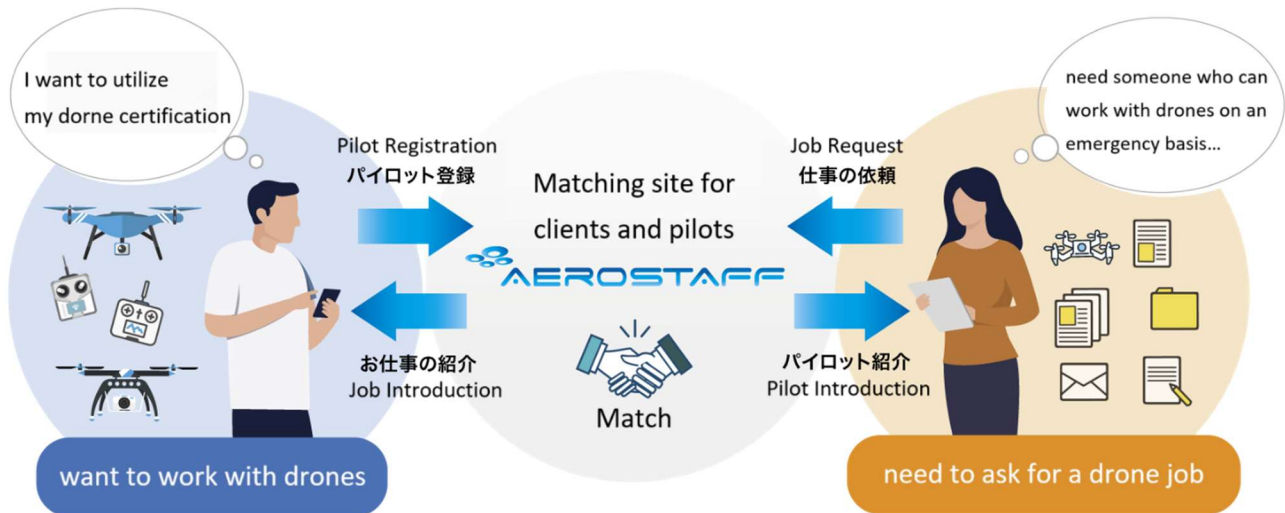

To this end, we have opened “AeroStaff,” a website that makes it easy for anyone to find a drone pilot. We expect that this will contribute to the promotion of drone utilization.

AeroStaff aims to register approximately 1,200 drone pilots over the next three years.
